Plaintiffs Efforts To Resolve
The Underlying Obligation

Plaintiff, MIDLAND CREDIT MANAGEMENT, INC., owns portfolios of consumer receivables, which it attempts to collect. When working with individual consumers, Plaintiff, MIDLAND CREDIT MANAGEMENT, INC., and its affiliates (collectively, "Plaintiff") generally attempt to contact consumers like Defendant through several means, all in an effort to establish contact and to resolve the underlying obligation. In doing so, Plaintiff attempts to assess each consumer's willingness to pay, through phone letters or other means. Plaintiff attempts to exclude consumers from its collection efforts, where Plaintiff believes those consumers are facing extenuating circumstances or hardships that would prevent them from making any payments.

When Plaintiff contacts consumers, it strives to treat consumers with respect, compassion and integrity. Plaintiff works with consumers in an effort to find mutually-beneficial solutions, often offering discounts, hardship plans, and payment options. Plaintiff's efforts are aimed at working with consumers to repay their obligations and to attain financial recovery. Plaintiff strives to engage in dialogue that is honorable and constructive, and to play a positive role in consumers' lives.

Despite Plaintiff's efforts to reach consumers and resolve the consumer's obligations, only a percentage of consumers choose to engage with Plaintiff. Those who do are often offered discounts or payment plans that are intended to suit their needs. Plaintiff would prefer to work with consumers to establish voluntary payment arrangements resulting in the resolution of any underlying obligations. However, the majority of Plaintiff's consumers ignore calls or letters, and some simply refuse to repay their obligations despite an apparent ability to do so. When this happens, Plaintiff must decide then whether to pursue collection through legal channels, including litigation like the present action against Defendant. Although the account is now in litigation, Plaintiff remains willing to explore a mutually-beneficial solution through voluntary payment arrangements, if possible.
